Why choose this program?

The Graduate Certificate in Case Management comprises two trimesters of part-time study.

This postgraduate program provides case managers, rehabilitation coordinators, practitioners in the Employment Services industry and people in related roles with the skills and knowledge to effectively manage programs that support their clients in achieving personal and system goals. This includes rehabilitation programs for injured and ill workers' compensation and other insurance claimants, assisting clients to obtain and maintain employment, and supporting people with injury or disability to achieve functional and participation goals. In addition, this program provides people with existing qualifications from other disciplines the knowledge and skills required to transition into these industries. Students with existing industry experience as well as students undergoing a career transition will be prepared both for effective practice in these industries and for further studies in rehabilitation counselling and/or human services.

Successful completion of the Graduate Certificate in Case Management (with a GPA of 5.0 or above) will also provide an opportunity to become an accredited rehabilitation counsellor through eligibility for entry to the Master of Rehabilitation Counselling (5578).

Graduates of this program will be better prepared for pursuing their careers and further develop:

- an understanding of rehabilitation theory, models, principles and practice
- an ability to communicate effectively with all key parties to the return to work process including workers, doctors, employers and allied health professionals
- an appreciation of the importance of community and vocational participation opportunities for a range of marginalised populations.
- an understanding of person-centred planning, case management theory, models, principles and practice as relevant to employment services, personal injury management and related practice
- an ability to communicate effectively with all key parties to the job search, matching, placement and maintenance process including job seeking employers and service providers
- an understanding of working with diverse populations
- an understanding of vocational evaluation processes and decision making
- additional skills and knowledge in areas such as disability studies, mental health practice, injury management and related human service areas (depending on choice of elective)

Lifelong graduate outcomes include:
development of problem-solving skills enhancement of interpersonal communication skills appreciation of issues surrounding disadvantage in terms of its impact on individuals and society acquisition of adult learning skills including analytical ability, presentation skills and writing skills.
